TEACHING EXPERIENCE

I have taught Rural Population Trends, Urbanism and Urbanization, Applied Demography, various seminars on population topics, Introductory Rural Sociology, Introductory Social Statistics, Intermediate Social Statistics, Multivariate Analysis in Sociological Research, and Introduction to Research Methods.

RESEARCH

Most of my research concerns population distribution and change in nonmetropolitan areas of the United States. This has included an examination of long-run trends in urbanization and redistribution; factors associated with the growth and decline of cities, villages, and rural areas; migration, particularly between metropolitan and nonmetropolitan areas, and the residential preferences of the population. Also I have considered rural-urban relationships, particularly in the study of part-time farming and commuting, as well as the residential preferences of the US population. Current work concerns nonmetropolitan population change and migration in recent decades, giving special attention to the black population in the South, and to the elderly population. With Leann Tigges I have studied nonmetropolitan commuting patterns. In addition to resources of the Department of Rural Sociology, computing services of the Center for Demography and Ecology, and some annual awards from the Graduate School, principal research support has come from the following grants:

Population Changes in Small Towns of the United States. National Science Foundation Research Grant NSF-GS 444; 1964-70.
Community Adjustment to Social Change in the North Central Region (with Gordon L. Bultena). Hatch Regional Project NC-80, 1965-70.
Metropolitan and Nonmetropolitan Migration in Wisconsin (with Paul Voss). Upper Great Lakes Regional Commission and USDA Title V,
Rural and Small Town America (1980 Census Monograph project with Calvin L. Beale). Russell Sage Foundation, 1982-87.

Population Redistribution in Nonmetropolitan Areas of the North Central Region (with Paul Voss). Hatch Regional Project NC-97, 1970-86.
 Migration and Population Redistribution in Wisconsin (with Paul Voss) Hatch Project 1690, 1986-90; 1990-96.
 The Impact of Migration on Areas of Chronic Economic Depression (with Paul Voss). The Aspen Institute, 1986-88.
