What this course is about. This course is an introduction to Sociology that focuses on the study of how we live in community and how we relate to the natural world. It is organized around a set of questions about how power structures these relationships and about the possibilities for organizing them differently. We will explore how new forms of global connection are changing the way we live in communities and relate to our environment. This will lead us to tackle some of today's most pressing social and environmental conflicts and crises. Some key questions that we will discuss are: "Which kinds of problems can be solved at the individual level and which require 'community' solutions?" "Is economic growth necessary for well-being?" "Can projects organized at the community level survive and thrive in a global economy?" and "How does a complex society resolve problems of distribution and inequality?" A key theme of the course will be the interconnectedness of events and processes unfolding in different parts of the world.

Course goals include:

- Understand how social science arguments are constructed and evaluated.
- Learn and practice core elements of sociological reasoning, including making connections between a social phenomenon and its larger context; evaluating the “situated” nature of knowledge; and recognizing the paradigms, or knowledge frameworks, that structure our thinking about social issues.
- Gain experience critically evaluating various sources of knowledge and data about social issues.
- Become familiar with key concepts such as: “community,” “development,” “growth,” “economic security,” “environmental justice,” “sustainability,” “globalization,” and “neoliberalism;” learn how these concepts are involved in contemporary debates about what is fair, just, and desirable for the places where we live and the world as a whole.
- Become familiar with important actors in the social processes that affect our communities and environment, including government, corporations, transnational institutions and social movements; also learn about historical shifts in the relationships among these actors.
- Develop skills and frameworks for analyzing how social processes disparately affect different groups of people.
- Make connections between sociological theories and concepts and your own experiences.

Course Organization. To accomplish these goals, the course is divided into four sections. In the first section on the “sociological imagination,” we will discuss sociology’s basic logic and tools. The next two sections, on “community” and “environmental sustainability” discuss how sociologists approach those two topics—how they conceptualize and study community and environment. The remainder of the course focuses on “challenges to sustainable community,” examining contemporary cases of communities responding to economic globalization and environmental change, including: movements for food security and sovereignty; environmental justice campaigns; responses to climate change; attempts to create local economic integration; responses to changing labor markets; and the challenges posed by migration.

Participation. The quality of our collective experience in this course depends on your participation. Participation means ATTENDING class, as well as keeping up with the readings and being able to discuss them thoughtfully in class. I will not post lecture notes on-line (although I will post power-point slides); the material covered in the lecture is not the same as what you will find in the readings. You will not be able to get a passing grade in this course if you do not attend lectures. You are required to attend your discussion section. If you miss more than 2 discussion section meetings, you will lose points (four points per session missed). Students will not lose points when they are absent to observe religious holidays, or have a doctor’s excuse. While this is a large class, I encourage debate based on careful reading of materials and we will work to cultivate an environment of respect for one another’s views.

Books/Readings

1. Schor, Juliet, True Wealth.

2. Miraftab, Faranak, Global Heartland.

Books are available at University Bookstore and other locations.

3. Course reserve readings are available on CANVAS.

Assignments

I. Response papers (5).

100 points

There are FIVE 250-300 word response papers. Each paper is worth 20 points for a total of 100 points. Response papers are due in-class on the day assigned. These papers are opportunities to develop your “sociological imagination” by applying class concepts to your own realm of experience. While there will be specific grading rubrics for each paper, in general they will be evaluated based on: 1) clarity and originality of ideas; 2) use of concepts and themes from readings; 3) logic and argument; and 4) writing style and technical aspects of presentation (such as grammar, citations, and spelling).

Response paper due dates: 5 February, 21 February, 12 March, 21 March, and 25 April.

For general information on good writing see the UW Writing Center website (www.wisc.edu/writing) or visit the Writing Center in 6171 Helen C. White (also satellite locations).

Late Papers. If you have an emergency and are unable to complete your assignment on time, please let me know immediately and I will consider an extension. Otherwise you will lose points (5 per day) for lateness.

II. Exams

Midterm 1 (28 February, in class)

100 points

Midterm 2 (4 April, in class)

100 points

Final 3 (8 May, non-cumulative)

100 points

Make-up Exam Policy

If you have a compelling emergency and if you make a request before the exam in writing, I will attempt to find a time for a make-up exam.

Total value of all assignments:

400 points

Grading Scale

368-400 points = A; 348-367 = A/B; 328-347 = B; 308-327 = B/C; 288-307 = C; 240-287 = D; below 240 = F

Grade Complaints: If you have questions about a grade, speak to your TA or to me first. If the question is not resolved, speak with the Chair of Community & Environmental Sociology, Gary Green, who will attempt to resolve the issue and inform you of the appeals procedure if no resolution is reached.

Academic Honesty. UW takes academic honesty very seriously. If you are found to be cheating on exams or papers, you will receive a grade of F and will be reported to the Dean of Students.

Plagiarism. All of the work that you submit for this class must be your own work, and you are required to quote and cite all references properly. Although this appears straightforward, it can sometimes be confusing. Whenever you are unsure about quoting and citing, please come to see me (or your TA) to figure out the best strategy. But in general, if you are in doubt, cite! If you use a web-based source, you can always cite the URL.

Accommodations. I wish to include fully any students with special needs in this course. The University of Wisconsin-Madison supports the right of all enrolled students to a full and equal educational opportunity. The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), Wisconsin State Statute (36.12), and UW-Madison policy (Faculty Document 1071) require that students with disabilities be reasonably accommodated in instruction and campus life. Faculty and students share responsibility for reasonable accommodations for students with disabilities. Students should inform me of their need for instructional accommodations by the end of the third week of the semester, or as soon as possible after a disability has been incurred or recognized. I will work either directly with you, or in coordination with the McBurney Center, to identify and provide reasonable instructional accommodations. Disability information, including instructional accommodations as part of a student's educational record, is confidential and protected under FERPA.

Workload. This course assumes a “3 to 1” rule, meaning students should expect to spend three hours per week working on course requirements outside of class for every course credit hour spent inside the classroom.

Respect. The substance addressed in this course can give rise to charged discussions. Class participants are strongly encouraged to share their thoughts and questions, and are expected to communicate with one another and are required to do so in a respectful manner. Those unable to maintain a professional and respectful level of exchange will be asked to remove themselves from the discussion. Quality learning is not achievable without tolerance and respect for others' views. Additionally, you are expected to be respectful of other students by refraining from engaging in behaviors that place barriers to your and others' learning (i.e., sleeping, chatting, and other distracting actions).

In-class Technology Use. Make sure your cell phones are turned off and put away. If your phone rings or you text during class, I will likely ask you to leave. While it may be tempting to use computers for personal pursuits during class, computer use must be limited to what is necessary for the course. In short, leave your technological devices off unless asked to bring them out.

Email and Phone Communication. The best way to contact me outside of class is via email (kcurtis@ssc.wisc.edu). I will try to respond to your emails within 48 hours. I may not respond to emails received on weekends until Monday. If I do not respond to your email within 48 hours (not including weekends), please do send me another email. While I will answer your questions via email, the best way to get an answer to your question is to talk to me in person during my office hours. When emailing, please use appropriate email etiquette (e.g., start your email with a proper salutation, write in complete sentences, end with a proper closing). Include CES 140 in the subject line.

Suggestions for doing well in this course:

- Keep up with the readings, and do the assigned readings before they are discussed in class.
- Take notes while you read. Afterwards, write a few sentences about the main point(s) of the piece. Jot down any questions you have about the readings, and bring these to class or section.
- Attend class. In lecture and in section, be prepared to ask questions or offer comments about the readings, how they relate to lecture material, or current events.
- Take notes. It is not enough to simply copy down the terms and diagrams presented on the board or screen. You need to write down important points from lecture and discussion as well. If you must miss class, get class notes from another student whom you trust to be a good note-taker. There is now considerable empirical evidence that taking notes by hand leads to much greater retention than using a laptop, so you might consider adopting this practice. <https://www.scientificamerican.com/article/a-learning-secret-don-t-take-notes-with-a-laptop/>
- Attend office hours. Both your TA and I are glad to meet with you in our offices outside of class. If you cannot attend scheduled office hours, let us know and we will find another time.
- Form a study group. There is on-going research focusing on what factors make study groups effective and not effective. <http://www.learningscientists.org/blog/2016/9/25/weekly-digest-28>
